1. INTRODUCTION

$SURFR is a community-driven meme coin and fan-based project inspired by the Silver Surfer, built on Robinhood Chain and paired with $SLV.

The project connects the cultural identity of the Silver Surfer with the broader silver narrative and the growing meme ecosystem on Robinhood Chain.

$SURFR is a meme coin created for entertainment, community and fan culture. It is not intended to represent ownership of silver or any other underlying asset.

2. THE NARRATIVE

The Silver Surfer was created by Jack Kirby and introduced by Marvel in 1966, later becoming closely associated with Stan Lee's writing.

The character has remained a recognizable part of comic culture for decades: a cosmic traveler riding a silver board across the universe.

$SURFR brings the Silver Surfer concept to Robinhood Chain, positioned at the intersection of silver, comic culture, memes and on-chain retail.

When people see silver, we want them to think of the Silver Surfer. When they see the Silver Surfer on Robinhood Chain, we want them to think $SURFR.

3. WHY SILVER?

Silver is one of the world's oldest monetary metals and remains an important industrial commodity. That gives $SURFR a narrative extending beyond crypto itself.

Instead of attempting to manufacture a trend, the project attaches its meme identity to an asset and theme already recognized globally.

The $SLV pairing makes that relationship visible directly on-chain:

$SLV = Silver

$SURFR = The Silver Surfer

The metal meets the meme.

4. WHY ROBINHOOD CHAIN?

Robinhood built its name around expanding access to financial markets for retail participants. That makes the Robinhood ecosystem a natural environment for memes built around recognizable financial and cultural narratives.

Character-driven meme coins can attract attention within emerging on-chain ecosystems. $SURFR approaches the opportunity from its own angle by combining a Silver Surfer-inspired fan narrative with the silver theme and $SLV pairing.

6. THE $SURFR RELAUNCH

The project changed its ticker from $$SLVR to $SURFR following community and team feedback about the long-term practicality of the double-dollar ticker. The name, silver narrative and community mission remain the same.

The relaunch uses a new contract address and a 1% tax on buys and a 1% tax on sells, replacing the previous 1.75% rates. Verify the contract address and network before trading.

7. COMMUNITY

$SURFR is ultimately a community-driven meme coin and fan project. The community expands the narrative through memes, artwork, videos, social engagement and participation across Robinhood Chain.

At the time of the relaunch update, the project team reported six listings, a $100,000 all-time-high market capitalization, approximately 280 holders and 7% of supply burned. These are historical, team-reported milestones, not guarantees of future results; on-chain figures and market data can change.

The project grows through attention, creativity and community participation. Ride the Silver Wave.

8. THE VISION

The vision for $SURFR is to establish a recognizable Silver Surfer-inspired meme identity within the Robinhood Chain ecosystem.

Silver already has its market. The Silver Surfer has decades of cultural recognition. Robinhood has retail. $SURFR brings those themes together through a meme coin built around community and fan culture.

No complicated story. No unnecessary promises. Just a recognizable theme, a silver narrative and a community riding the wave.
